Capitol Comments

By Dan Dan Daniel

(Text of Statement by Congressman Dan Daniel on the Floor of the House, Monday, March 14, 1977, during debate on legislation to ban the importation of Rhodesian Chrome)

I hesitate to question any group's motives for action or inaction, but the complicity of big steel in the repeal of the Byrd Amendment is too obvious to be ignored. By supporting imposition of the ban on chrome from Rhodesia, the industry has further imperiled this nation's sources of a vital mineral for its own narrow interests. Having supported the Byrd Amendment in the past, the industry has done an about-face, declaring there will be no damage to it by imposing the ban. I am disturbed that any industry in this country would put its own interests ahead of national security and economic health.

The excuse in the Congress for this action was human rights. Now we find our purchases of chrome ore and ferrochrome must be made from such countries as the Soviet Union, Albania, and India, none of which has shown any concern for human rights. How hypocritical can we be?

I intend to monitor closely not only the effect on prices - which may be considerable - but also the availability of supply.
